Re: DTV.Gov Transition Partners Quarterly Report/1st Quarter 2008
Filed in MB Docket No. 07-148 and dtvreporting@fcc.gov

Dear Ms. Dortch:

This letter is submitted pursuant to the Commission's Report and Order, released March 3, 2008, in the above-referenced proceeding ("Report and Order"), which directs DTV.Gov Transition Partners to report their digital television consumer education efforts on a quarterly basis as a condition of continuing partner status. The individual Transition Partners are identified on the Commission's digital television website, www.dtv.gov/partners.html. The list on the website includes NBC and Telemundo. Each of NBC's and Telemundo's owned and operated stations has filed a separate Form 388 in this proceeding reporting on its consumer education efforts in the first quarter of 2008, as required by the Report and Order. In addition, information concerning the separate consumer education efforts of the NBC and Telemundo Television Networks has been supplied to the Commission in a letter submitted in this proceeding on April 9, 2008, by the National Association of Broadcasters. Another partner listed on the website, Bravo HD+, is a cable channel that was launched by NBC in 2003, but which discontinued operation in late 2004. Accordingly, Bravo HD+ should be removed from the list of DTV.Gov Transition Partners.

Respectfully submitted,

Margaret L. Tobey
